Editorial

The third piano concerto of Camille Saint-Saëns presents itself already with a formidable harp-character by its opening arpeggios and glissandi[i]. Delving deeper into the score there where clues that gave me the impression, that maybe Saint-Saëns originally had the score for a harp concerto written and at one point changed his mind and by adding more notes converted it into a piano concerto[ii].
Some of those clues are the downward arpeggios (d-f) in bar 23 and 25[iii] that easily could use an a, but it is ommited and gives so the harpist the chance to change pedals for the next glissando using an a-flat (you have to change the chromatic glissando into a diatonic of corse). Very often, when controlling if the pedal change was possible, the melody line was build in a way, that seemed to be considerate of that already.
The concerto offers many passages putting the soloist alone between full orchestra parts[iv] and you could se this as a way to make the harp more audible (as it is done e.g.in the Harp Concerto by Geir Tveitt). But of course, it could be that Saint-Saëns wanted to give his piano concerto a more harp like touch and tried to empathize the harp techniques.
I am aware, that harpists generally don't like adaptations from original piano pieces, so I apologize, but I had to try that out 😊

The following files were selected as sources for the adaptation:
Durand's orchestral score from 1876 (Paris: Durand, Schoenewerk & Cie., N.d. [1876]. Plate D. S. & Cie. 2176 / https://imslp.org/wiki/Special:ImagefromIndex/30577/ab18).
And the piano version published by Durand (Paris: Durand, Schoenewerk & Cie., Nd [1875]. Plate DS & Cie. 2134 / https://imslp.org/wiki/Special:ImagefromIndex/03386/ab18).
Of the works I used as inspiration, comparison and as a benchmark for what is playable for the harp I point out three works:
Henriette Renié, Légende
https://imslp.org/wiki/L%C3%A9gende_(Reni%C3%A9%2C_Henriette)
François Joseph Dizi, 48 Etudes for Harp (https://imslp.org/wiki/48_Etudes_for_Harp_(Dizi%2C_Fran%C3%A7ois_Joseph))
Albert Zabel, Harp Concerto, Op.35 (https://imslp.org/wiki/Harp_Concerto%2C_Op.35_(Zabel%2C_Albert)).
Additional also Information from the book "Harp Scoring" by Stanley Chaloupka.

The original dynamic markings have mostly been kept for orchestra and solo part. Orchestra, soloist and conductor will work out the dynamic shape and balance themselves anyway. To get a better overview, the page numbers of the source score are noted to the left of the rehearsal letters (e.g., "p. 6" left of the "A"). Since the harp cannot be as penetrating as the piano, the double woodwind and brass were reduced to only one instrument and the voices partially distributed over to the existing instruments. The string could also be reduced accordingly in numbers or dynamic.

Scales or arpeggios are written out, the soloist will decide anyway, what to play and whether to replace a passage with glissandi or do chords as arpeggios. Rapid repetitions of the same notes have been removed when possible but when it was meant to boom I left it alone 😊 (esp. third mov.). Cromatic runs have been changed to diatonic runs, chords have been thinned out, octave doublings removed[v] or marked as ad libitum[vi]. The final passages of the outer movements were designed in a way that the harp plays in the orchestral breaks[vii]. Bars 89-104 remain as the original score, as the Harp Concerto op. 35 by Albert Zabel has similar figures (mov. 1, bars 128-132). The complexity of the piano score in the first movement bars 60ff and 261ff has been spread out to strings and woodwind. And in movement 3, bars 121-124 have the eighths in the harpists left hand been outsourced to the double basses and trombone. And in mov. 3, bars 258ff and 274ff I invented a new form and changed the opening theme of movement 3 a bit to make it playable, too. The trills in movement 1, bars 210ff have been stopped when the arpeggios are played (thanks to Birgit Kaar for that idea!). As I'm no harpist myself, I don't know if the score lays good in the hand of a harpist. After Birgit Kaar, the opening arpeggios do so in the original score and I used the tips by Johannes Wik and Isabelle Perrin and had the score not so wide spread as I had it before I contacted them. But a soloist who is taking up the endeavor to play this adaptation is shurely re-adapting the score to the own possibilities and tastes nethertheless!

Acknowledgments:
First and foremost, I would like to thank my wife, Elke! When she first heard the concerto, she already said that the music sounded more like a harp- than a piano-concerto, which got the whole thing rolling and encouraged and supported me to work on and finish the arrangement 😊.
I would also like to thank Birgit Kaar, solo harpist of the Kiel Philharmonic Orchestra (Germany), who took the time during her rehearsal work to explain the basic concepts of harp arrangement to a greenhorn and had a good look at the first drafts! Many thanks also to Johannes Wik, group leader harp of the Bergen Philharmonic Orchestra and Isabelle Perrin, harp teacher at "Norges musikkhøgskole" in Oslo for their time, tips and helpful information!

Matthias Ekert, 5. August 2023.
